

#1 Farmer Worker

“I’ve been growing these tomatoes outside, using lots of water and pesticides to help them grow. They aren’t ripe yet, but I need to pick them today so that they can get shipped out tomorrow. It sure is hard on the land only growing tomatoes all the time! I better make sure to add lots more fertilizer!”

#2 Farm Boss

“Thanks for the tomatoes. I wonder if people in Canada even know we send them unripe tomatoes? Keep up the good work, we’ll need to send another batch soon. And don’t forget the pesticide! People only buy tomatoes that look perfect.”

#3 Truck Driver

“Thanks for the tomatoes. I know I should be gentle, but sometimes I drive over bumps! It’s a long drive to Canada. These tomatoes are going to travel thousands of kilometers!”

#1 Aquaponics Farmer

“I grew these tomatoes at my aquaponics farm, in an old warehouse downtown. Amazing to think I can grow food in the middle of the city, inside a building! Growing inside means I don’t use pesticide, and all that fish poop in the water is better than any chemical fertilizer! These tomatoes looks 100% ripe and delicious, so I will pick them today, and take them to the farmers market to sell tomorrow.”

#2 Customer

“I love coming to the farmers market every Saturday. I walk over and always find lots of delicious looking food, and the farmers are super friendly. Your tomatoes look really good. I’ll buy a basket to make pasta sauce for supper.”
